GAMBOLING GRUNION FAIR PREY STARTING TONIGHT

Open season on grunion starts tonight.

That means that the Southern California public can again gather on moonlit beaches when the tide is high to catch those strange specimens of marine life as they squirm and flop on the sand between waves.

In announcing the resumption of the open season, Spence D. Turner, county forester, fire and game warden, explained that the closed season during April, May and June is designed to protect the silvery smelt during the height of their spawning season in order to prevent their extinction. Persons who violated the closed season received heavy fines in recent months, he said.

"Grunion are the only marine fish which come ashore to lay their eggs," he explained. "This shows some wise planning on nature's part, for the number of eggs which they lay is very limited in comparison with the vast numbers laid by other fish, and consequently they must take extra precautions to protect them from their enemies.

Offers No Prediction "The canny instinct which is responsible for these precautions brings them ashore on the first few evenings after high tide, and not at the peak of the tide. This reduces the likelihood of succeeding waves eroding the upper reaches of sand and washing the eggs back into the water" before the two-weeks hatching period is over.

"High tides come at the full of the moon and the dark of the moon, but the grunion usually make their runs while the moon is bright. This shows more wise planning on nature's part, for the tide at the dark of the moon is highest, and, coming several weeks after high tide, erodes the sand enough to free the eggs and wash them back to sea."

Turner refused to make any predictions when or where the fish could be seen, but pointed out that July 23 is the date of the next moonlit high tide. Grunion run on the second, third and fourth nights thereafter, and, on this occasion, will be 9:10, 9:56 p. m. and 10:38 p. m., respectively. The runs usually last for about an hour, beginning with the turn of the tide.

Track Promoters Confident of Getting Permit

So confident are the promoters back of the proposed second horse racing track for Los Angeles county that they came forward today with a request to the board of supervisors asking that the county take steps to improve a nearby street at a cost of $79,000.

Construction work on the track has never stopped since it was started near the city of Inglewood several months ago, although the promoters, the Hollywood Turf club, has not been able to get its permits thru the state horse racing commission. It is understood that stock still is being sold in the track.

"The Hollywood Turf club is vitally interested in improving Creshaw boulevard, as it is now engaged in building a first-class major track on its property adjacent to the Potrero Country club, and will have it ready for operation about Oct. 15," Attorney Claude Andrews wrote the supervisors. It is in the fourth supervisory district of Supervisor Leland M. Ford.

SPORT SHOTS

year when the "dead ball" comes back. Phillies—Built wrong for the Phillies' hand box park, where they haven't the power to slug it out with opposition. A better team on the road where their pitchers are not handicapped by that short right field fence. Reds—Not as bad as the records show but nobody can find out exactly what's the big trouble with a team that seemed to have first division possibilities in the spring.

PASS ROAD OPEN

The Tioga Pass road which extends from Carl Inn junction across Yosemite National Park to Mono lake officially is open. Fair to good old gravel leads from the Aspen Valley Ranger Station, thence dirt road to Cathedral creek.

Toolies March On to National Supply Title

In winning both of their games during the past week, the Tool-room of the National Supply league maintained their undefeated march toward the championship in nightball. The Toolies crushed the Apprentices last Wednesday 10 to 6 and swamped the Welders, 13 to 3, Tuesday afternoon. Yesterday the Apprentices were forced to forfeit their game to the Receiving Department when they could not round up a complete team. The standings of the league are:

Team	Won	Lost
Toolroom	9	0
Heat-Treat	5	3
Welders	4	5
Receivers	4	5
Apprentices	3	6
Warehouse	1	7

Colmer, Former Student Here, Is Pitching for Angels

Sports accounts of the activities of the Los Angeles Angels took on added interest this week for local baseball fans who learned that John Colmer, former Torrance high school student, is now pitching for the Coast league team.

Colmer made good in a recent try-out and is now under contract with the Angels. His brother, Andy, lives at the C. C. M. O., while his father is well-known in Torrance. Friends of the budding ball star are taking a deep interest in his career and are hoping that he'll go far after seasoning with the Angeleno club.

Richfield Plans Two More Units At Watson Plant

Expansion of its refinery at Watson, near Torrance, by construction of two combination crude topping and cracking units to cost $5,000,000, was announced this week by the Richfield Oil corporation. Work is to start immediately on the project which will require a year to complete.

Each unit will have a daily capacity of 30,000 barrels. The output of the refinery will be increased 25 percent. A polymerization plant will be installed with a daily capacity of 6,000,000 cubic feet of gas. This plant makes gasoline from so-called waste gases.

The plant is designed to use electric power exclusively in heaters, fractionating towers, receiving houses and other auxiliary equipment.

GRANT POOL REQUEST

Reporting that Leo Guerra had given up his pool hall business in the Pueblo at 2204 Harriett street, Jesus Mora applied to the city council Tuesday night for the continuance of the license under his name. It was granted.

Engineer Qualifies As Patent Attorney

John Young, who has been an engineer in the Pattern department at the National Supply Co. plant since he graduated from Stanford University, received word this week that he had successfully passed a Federal examination and is now qualified as a patent attorney. He has been studying law for the past several years. Young lives on Gramercy avenue.
